I mentioned this before to a few people. They have been meeting with Swyft Cities and Glydwys since at least last fall.

Rudy made me aware that the City of Anaheim is also colluding with Swyft Cities for an elevated cable transit network between ARTIC/Stadium/Honda Center, over SR-57, to the resort/convention area. I was told they have a consultant preparing a network study planning potential gondola connections. They want to see it built in Irvine first to assess the system. It is marketed at about $10 million a mile with minimal impacts, and flexibility to modify. He said they could also consider running it south on Harbor and north to downtown.
